Eskimo Art survives

By Lisa Oliveira

Nothing to do on a Sunday afternoon? Well, why not visit the Modern Languages building at the University of Waterloo?

Every week the Modern Languages building houses a different exhibit.

On Sunday Sept. 24, it has turned on exhibit on the last national.

This changing show is also the last exhibit of Eskimo Art. The only way the Eskimo Art has been exhibited in the last national.

York.

Observing the pieces of art, one cannot help but to notice the time and patience that goes into every individual piece.

The exhibit reveals the way the Eskimo art has evolved.

The first pieces depict the Eskimo in the modern world of Eskimo's life, showing the Eskimo in the modern world of Eskimo's life, showing the Eskimo in the modern world of Eskimo's life, showing the Eskimo in the modern world of Eskimo's life.

Another remarkable piece of the exhibit was a traditional Eskimo mask, which Eskimo artists used in their work.

Exhibit. It was intended to be a work of Eskimo art.

Johnny Got His Gun relevant to today

by Greg Martin

It may seem strange to be writing about a book that was written in 1926. Johnny Got His Gun was written by Michael Williams at a time when the world was in a state of war. It is just as relevant now as it was then.

The book was one of the first to be published in the United States. It was published only days before the start of the Second World War. The book is a story of a man who is maimed in the war and is left with no sense of touch, sight, or hearing. It is a story of a man who is left with no sense of touch, sight, or hearing.

SPORTS

Sox will take it

by Greg Smith

The baseball season is finally over and after 161 games only two teams remain in the race for the World Series.

The Baltimore Orioles, Chicago White Sox, Philadelphia Phillies, and Los Angeles Dodgers are the remaining teams with the Orioles leading in Chicago for the American League Eastern and the Dodgers against the Phillies for the National League crown.

Trying to predict who will win the World Series is always extremely hard, but this year it is even harder because the two best teams are both playing each other first in the American League playoffs.

There is a number of teams in a chance starting with the number one contender. The Chicago White Sox are the team to beat in the home playoffs. They have the best all-around team and they thought they were the worst Western division. They have the tough, proven lineup commonly in the second half of the season.

Playing in Chicago's strongest suit and in the playoffs (it is the most rugged and aggressive) Lefty Rife, Rick Duren and Floyd Reuter are the best three starters in the league. Add relief pitcher Salome Harpau and you have the best pitching staff of the four teams.

Starting staff itself are also strong units for Chicago, with pitchers Ron Gill and Greg Maddux, and relievers Billy Lewis and John Cruz. Chicago also has the best catcher in Carlton Fisk and the best outfielder in Harold Baines.

If Baltimore can put out the White Sox in the first round they should be able to win the World Series. But putting out Chicago will prove too hard for this team.

The Orioles have the second best all-around team and only lack a few ingredients that would make them the number one team.

Their starting pitching is just a touch better. Chicago's is and their relief staff is just so good with Tippy Martinez every day of the last.

The infield is weaker than Chicago's because of Third Base. It didn't win last year, but Third Base at second is first and starting. They were first in the best in Eddie Murray and Cal Ripken. The infield is not even comparable to Chicago's and the Orioles' pitcher Rick Dempsey just doesn't have as much talent as Fisk.

The Baltimore Orioles are good but not quite good enough to stop the White Sox.

The Dodgers are probably good enough to win the National League pennant. Their pitching is stronger than the Phillies with high class and experience. Pete Harn Walsh and a steadily making up a great starting staff and will give Chicago some problems in the World Series.

Pedro Guerrero, Mike Marshall and Ken Landrum are good hitters at the plate and will help out the Phillies.

The Dodgers are the best team in the National League. They have a better variety of talented and powerful. Unless everything falls apart they should drop the Phillies easily.

The Phillies have to be the underdog of the four teams. Although they have good pitching and some good hitting they cannot match the other three teams. They have the weak infield and relief and they are much too weak in the outfield.

So Matt and Tom Hayes are their only good third basemen they are not enough. The only way for the Phillies have a chance is if the other teams play very poor their levels and if Mike Schmidt is hit. Schmidt is the most dangerous batter in baseball today. If he starts reaching the ball out of the park will mean no later than the Phillies will be tough.

Rally had three entries

Despite only three rally entries for the first Columbia University Rally, the event did stand as a success, and the organizers are optimistic the students will be more involved in future rallies.
